Jon Winebrenner

The founder and president of Vancouver-based Hurdler Studios, Jon Winebrenner helps others realize their ideas in "our new world where virtually anyone with an idea can create a globally distributed product funded by the crowd." His multi-faceted firm devises everything from industrial products to business brands. The firm focuses on what they call "ProdUX Design," where digital and physical mediums combine to create a single user experience. The award-winning Clug Clip was internally designed at Hurdler Studios; it received over $100,000 in funding through Kickstarter and is now distributed in 14 countries.

Clug Clip Hanging Bike Rack by Hurdler Studios, $20 An innovative storage solution, this piece secures bicycles without a kickstand or standard bike rack. The small wall-mounted Clug Clip clasps the front tire, keeping the bicycle upright on the back wheel. They're available in three sizes for different tire widths: road, hybrid, and mountain. The Clug Clip is the world's smallest bike rack and was launched in 2014.
