Walnut Studio Dooble Tube

As any guy or gal born to the high life knows, presentation is key. When you whip out a perfect, unbent, freshly rolled joint at the party, that's great—and if you happen to pull it out of a hand-crafted leather carrying case, well, that shows you've got real style. Walnut Studio has risen to meet the demand of legal cannabis looking cool with its hand-stitched, hand-dyed, vegetable-tanned leather Dooble Tube. The tube's brass dog-tag chain will help you keep your joints from spilling—you can use it to clip the doob tube to your belt or to string several tubes together, each with a brass dog tag. Nicely done, sir. $28, walnutstudiolo.com

You just might convince someone you have the Midas touch. Now that's a draw, don't you think? $55 for a 12-pack, shinepapers.com

Renew Sports Car

You're gonna need a sweet ride, high roller. Look no further than the Renew Sports Car. Picking up where Henry Ford left off in 1941, when he dreamed of growing an "automobile from the soil" made and powered by hemp, Renew Sports Cars are designed to have a classic roadster feel, all the modern amenities and an environmentally friendly message. The body of the car is made entirely from hemp fibers, mounted on a carbon-debt-free, re-certified 1990-'97 Miata chassis. That combination gives the Renew a lifetime carbon footprint of roughly 10 percent less than today's average electric car. This whip will make you look good while you're helping save the environment. Be part of the revolution. $40,000, renewsportscars.com
